A 'Warning' To Socialists Seen in Vote

By Axel Krause

PARIS - Center-right candidates scored sweeping gains in the first round of France's municipal elections Sunday, defeating incumbent Socialist and Communist officials, including some ministers in the cabinet of President François Mitterrand.
Projections and early results
Sunday evening indicated that conservatives and centrists were re-conquering many of the large cities and towns that they lost to the left in the last municipal elections, in There has been an indisputable rise by the right and backward slippage by the majority," said Lionel Jospin, first secretary of the Social-ist Party. According to early esti-mates, Mr. Jospin lost his own seat as municipal councillor from the 18th district of Paris.

Mr. Jospin, according to the projections, obtained 37.1 percent of the vote, while Alain Juppe, a supporter of Mayor Jacques Chirac of Paris, won 50.05 percent.

Although incomplete results from larger cities showed that the shift was not so sharp as had been predicted earlier. Mr. Chirac, who is laying claim to leadership of the is aying cannot operate and of the center-right opposition. Sunday evening termed the results "an unequivocal warning" to the Socialist government about their present policies.

Under the traditional French practice of multiple office-holding, politicians who lose municipal seats are not required to give up their national positions. But political pressures can lead to the resignations of those who do worse than expected, and there has been widespread speculation in recent weeks that a severe defeat for the left would trigger a cabinet reshuffling. Center-right candidates won an absolute majority in 21 cities and towns with populations of over 30,000, according to early estimates. The computer-based predictions appeared to put the opposition in a strong position for win-ning back most large cities won by the left in the municipal elections

BONN — Chancellor Helmut Kohl's conservative Christian Democrats won a landslide victory in West Germany's national election Sunday, according to computer projections.

Hans-Jochen Vogel, the Social Democratic Party's candidate for chancellor, congratulated Mr. Kohl on his victory. He told reporters at the party headquarters: "This is a defeat. We will be constructive opposition."

The result was interpreted as a mandate to Chancellor Kohl to go shead with major policies he advocated during the campaign. He had promised to stand by the decision of the Western alliance to begin deploying U.S. Pershing-2 and cruise in West Germany by the end of the year unless the Geneva disarmament talks between the United States and the Soviet Union bring satisfactory results.

According to the projections late Sunday night, the alliance of the Christian Democrats and the Christian Social Union, their Bavarian sister party, won 48.9 percent of the vote, which would give them 244 seats in the 496-seat Bundestag, a gain of 18 seats.

The Social Democrats were projected to win 38.1 percent of the vote, for 190 seats, a loss of 28. The Free Democratic Party of Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher was projected to win 7 percent for 35 seats, a loss of 18, and the Greens, a coalition of environmental and disarmament activists, were winning 5.5 percent for 27 seats. It was the Greens' first representation in the lower house of parliament. The projections were expected to prrespond closely with the actual ults of the voting.

The result is sensational, words that I don't use lightly." said mentator of the first channel of West German television.

In that election, Mr. Schmidt won with the help of Mr. Genscher's Free Democrats. But that party broke ranks with the Social Democrats last September and ran Sun-day as a partner of the Christian Democrats.

So disappointed were the Christian Democrats over their 1976 defeat under Mr. Kohl that in the next election, 1980, they replaced him as candidate with Franz Josef Strauss, the combative veteran politician who heads the Christian Social Union. and as party leader campaigned loyally for Mr. Strauss, who suf-fered a humiliating defeat. The two parties then turned back to Mr.

In the campaign, Mr. Kohl ex-ploited to the fullest the advantage of being the incumbent chancellor. Having assumed the post only last all, he enjoyed the benefits of being in power without suffering many of the drawbacks.

He attributed everything that has gone wrong in West Germany - notably the record 2.54 million left by the Social Democratic governments of the last 13 years, and he claimed that everything that has gone right is the result of the measures taken by his own govern-

Mr. Kohl has been in party politics all his adult life. After winning a doctorate in political science with a dissertation on Germany's political parties after the war, he went into local politics in the town of Ludwigshafen in western Germany. He became a member of the city council then member of the state parliament and ultimately premier of the state of Rhineland-Palatinate.

He was 39 when he was made national party leader of the CDU and head of the party's faction in parliament, two posts he has held

He has been criticized by more sophisticated politicians as being In his post-election statement shallow, and his style on the stump. > But shallow or not, there is no doubt that Mr. Kohl's call for a return to the simple German values of hard work, thrift and belief in the Fatherland have struck a responsive chord. "Kohl may sound ridiculous in Bonn, but he sounds good in the small towns," a West German editor said.

Mr. Vogel, 57, the Social Demo-cratic candidate, is also a lifelong politician, but had to battle the handicap of being a relatively new figure in national politics. He had been a successful, long-term mayor of Munich and was justice minister under Chancellor Schmidt.

Two years ago, he was sent by the party to West Berlin to lead the Social Democrats in a city election that they expected to lose. He served as acting mayor of West Berlin for a few months, then threw himself into the city election. which he indeed lost but with 2 creditable result.

Almost All the Many Candidates Pass Muster at Democrats' Dinner

By David S. Broder

Washington Post Service BOSTON — Early in the evening. Senator Edward M. Kennedy, the local favorite and designated needler, looked down the dais and said, "Will the next president of the United States please stand up?"

With some embarrassment, the six visiting firemen came to their feel Senators Dale Bumpers, Alan Cranston, John H. Glenn Jr., Gary Hart and Ernest F. Hollings and former Vice President Walter F. Mondale stood there, looking sheepish.

The Massachusetts Democratic fund-raiser Thursday night was in the format Massachusetts Democrats love: the roast, where a politician is judged by his ability to respond to slurs on his character. competence and intellect.

The jabs that Mr. Kennedy administered were light, by local standards, but they provided a bit of leavening for what already seems a lengthy Democratic presidential race.

At the end of the long evening, the consensus of the politically shrewd audience of 1,500 was that Mr. Mondale had burt himself. that the others had all done reasonably well, and that it probably did not matter a lot in the larger scheme of things.

Mr. Mondale did not show up for the pre-dinner group picture with Mr. Kennedy, and he insisted on speaking early, which is part of "I'm-not-one-of-the-pack" strategy. He spoke just as dinner was being served; the clatter, com-bined with a faulty sound system, made him mostly unintelligible And as soon as he finished speaking, he left. Those who heard him assured the others that they had not missed

When Mr. Kennedy jabbed him about telling The Boston Globe of several major policy disagreements with President Jimmy Carter and suggested that "Fritz could have saved me a lot of trouble in 1980" by challenging Mr. Carter himself, aircraft, informed sources said. The the best the former vice president deal would increase the number of could come back with was a weak line about a local character named Dapper O'Neill

> When Mr. Kennedy said Mr. Hart was "young, attractive, vigorous and charismatic - but I like him anyhow," Mr. Hart was quick to come back with a declaration that, because of the sound system distortion, "when you heard Ted say it was a pleasure to introduce me, he was really saying it's a pleasure to endorse me. When Mr. Kennedy kidded Mr. Cranston about his age, saying he was glad Mr. Cranston was popularizing the idea of a 68-year-old president because "I may need it some day," the Californian shot back, "I'm glad you're adjusting so nicely to your role as an elder

A great state tradition was cited by Mr. Kennedy in introducing Mr. Glenn. "Ohio, the mother of presidents." he said. "Rutherford War-B. Hayes, William McKinley, Warren G. Harding."

Mr. Glenn returned: "We're all here seeking Ted's endorsement We know how valuable it is. Look what it did for Jane Byrne."

For Mr. Bumpers, probably the least known to the crowd, Mr. Kennedy intoned, with a note of absolute incredulity, "President Bumpers — it does have a certain

The Pentagon's decision, which is to be amnounced within a few days, will be a major victory for the Northrop Corp. of Los Angeles and the McDonnell Douglas Corp. of St. Louis, Missouri, which jointly manufacture the plane.

Both companies, and F-18 boosters in the Navy and in Congress, had feared that the F-18 program might be canceled because of questions about the jet's range and other performance characteristics.

The Pentagon official, who briefed reporters on Friday on the condition that he not be identified, said he was still bothered by the mability of the F-18 to meet the Navy's combat radius specifica-

Atom Blast Over U.S. Not Threat To A-Plants, Limited Study Says Dr. Longmire and other experts

By Milton R. Benjamin

WASHINGTON - A high-altitude nuclear explosion over the United States would be unlikely to trigger simultaneous accidents at atomic power plants, a government study concludes. But the report's authors acknowledge that the study was limited, and a leading defense expert called it "the gentlest investigation possible."

The report on the vulnerability of atomic power plants to electro-magnetic pulse, or EMP, the intense radio-wave energy produced by a nuclear explosion, was prepared by the Energy Department's Sandia National Laboratories. A draft of the study is expected to be released soon by the Nuclear Regu-

U.S. military planners have long been concerned that if even a single several-megaton nuclear weapon were detonated 250 miles (400 kilometers) over the Midwest the resulting burst of radio-wave energy would destroy electronic circuitry and knock out communications and electricity in most of the Unit-enough differences at the four sites to warn that its findings could "only be extrapolated to other plants with caution," Sandia concluded that, in general, the "likelihood that individual components examined will be failed" as a result of EMP "is small.

Therefore, it is unlikely that an EMP event will fail sufficient equipment so as to prevent safe shutdown" of reactors, the report

Several members of a special outside panel of experts that re-viewed a draft of the report criticized the investigators' methodoloand emphasized the study's gy and emiliations. Dr. Conrad L. Longmire, a former nuclear weapons designer at Los Alamos who in the early 1960s developed the first comprehensive theory of EMP, was particularly critical of the failure to involve more experts working on military studies of EMP effects. "It could appear that the gentlest investigation possible was desired," Dr. Longmire said.

In a detailed critique of the methodology, he challenged a "long chain of plausible but not The Sandia investigators concedalso questioned the study's useful-ness in light of Sandia's decisions to analyze only selected reactor components; to consider only the first microsecond-long burst of EMP and exclude the effects of longer-lasting magnet hydrodynamic EMP; and not to study the implications of false signals sent to

But Roger J. Matison, NRC director of systems integration, contended that the study "fully addressed" the main question of whether an EMP wave would be strong enough "to damage the equipment necessary to safely shut down the plant." He said the study had concluded that the plants were 'not very vulnerable."

warsaw that a number of detained finion activists are going on trial in other parts of the country.

Alexander Malachowski, 58, a journalist, was arrested Wednesday. His wife, who is paralyzed and requires her husband's help to eat and move, quoted a lawyer as telling her that he was formally arrested Friday evening. She said she did not know what charges had been lodged against him. Mr. Malachowski is a member of Solidarity's national coordinating committee and a deputy chairman of its Warsaw teviewing commission, a panel that oversees local government policy.

The police searched his home before arresting him. They also asked him questions about whom he had been meeting recently, but Mrs. Malachowska said he declined to answer them. Mr. Malachowski was interned with thousands of Solidarity officials when martial law was declared in December 1981. He was held for four months, and suffered a minor heart attack while in detention. He was later retired from his job as an employee of the state broadcasting service. The arrest came as a number of Solidarity leaders were facing court proceedings elsewhere in Poland. In Katowice, southern Poland. Attempts to organize unofficial unions have been prohibited since October, when the government banned Solidarity and all other nongovernment unions. They have been replaced by official union cells at individual enterprises, but the government has had little success in attracting membership.

Five Solidarity officials went on trial Thursday in the northern town of Elblag on charges that they caused a disturbance last summer at an internment camp in Kwidzyn, north of Bydgoszcz.

Witnesses said at the time that prison guards beat prisoners severely in quelling a protest against restricted visiting hours. One man who was due to appear as a defendant was still in a hospital. In August, Poland's Roman Catholic primate, Jozef Glemp, read a letter to pilgrims in Czestochowa, in which a woman com-plained that her son had been beaten at the camp on Aug. 14. This Wednesday, the trial of Anna Walentynowicz, a former welder and crane operator who was a symbolic figure in the early days of Solidarity, is due to start in Grudziadz, 120 miles (193 kilometers) northeast of Warsaw. She was arrested Sept. 1 after She is to be charged with pursuing union activity. Underground builletins said she has been accused of trying to organize a strike in the Lenin Shipyards after martial law was declared. Mrs. Walentinyowicz, 53, was dismissed from a Gdansk ship-yard in August 1980. That action precipitated the strike that led to the creation of Solidarity. The government later acceded to the protesters' demands for her reinstatement.

Seventh Non-Aligned Summit

"We represent nations which, amidst their colourful diversity, are united in their unvarying search for freedom, equality, peace and stability; for their own peoples and for all the world. Non-Alignment is the courage of true independence."

Indira Gandhi

New Delhi the Seventh Non-Aligned Summit is reinforcing and rededicating the principles which have sustained the movement since its beginnings in 1961.

India is privileged under the leadership of Mrs. Indira Gandhi, Prime Minister, to assume the Chairmanship of the movement, for three years at this critical time in world affairs.

In the past two decades, non-alignment has come a long way. It has not only survived but grown from a membership of twenty-five to ninety-seven.

Its basic principles have become the established touchstones by which to test the formulas of world peace.

The major theme of the Seventh Summit will be to demonstrate the continuing relevance of the movement in the 'eighties and to search for progressively larger areas of political, economic and cultural cooperation.

Underlying the national policies of the non-aligned nations represented by ninety-seven heads of States and their foreign ministers, is a basic policy of seeking world peace and relating this to the development needs of the third world.

The Seventh Summit is an assurance that non-alignment will be heard — for the cause of global peace, constructive cooperation, and concentrated development, irrespective of ideology and national differences.

Argentina, which last year defied Margaret Thatcher, now proclaims its defiance of her tween the effects of inflation and recession, countryman George Orwell. President Reynaldo Bignone has announced that 1984 will be the long-awaited year of freedom, when the military will finally yield power to an elected government of civilians.

Nothing in the military regime's seven-year record would become it so well as thus to honor its word, first given after the debacle in the Falkland Islands. In fact, the military's retreat to the barracks might even cause a more favorable international view of Argentina's claims to Falkland sovereignty.

The armed forces, which enjoyed broad support when they overthrew Isabel Perón in 1976, are now thoroughly discredited. Defeat in the Falklands war is the most dramatic explanation, but only a partial one. The regime's reputation is also stained by the thousands of "disappeared" victims of its dirty war against domestic terrorists. Most appear to have been murdered without benefit of judicial process. leaving in doubt how many had even remote links to terrorist crimes.

The economy, whose wreckage was a major justification for the 1976 coup. is again in ruins. Inflation runs in triple digits and still rises. Foreign debt is staggering. Unemployment, once inconceivable in underpopulated living standards have been badly battered.

Argentina's recent civilian governments have not done much better in economic management or in human tights protection. The promised transition may be yet another futile Argentine alternation. But some reasons for hope can be found.

Terrorism, the curse of the 1970s, seems all but tamed. Perónism, the mass movement of the urban working class, is no longer a monolith. Juan Perón, the old dictator, is gone, and sabel, his widow, has not inherited his charismatic appeal. New and attractive leaders have come forward to lead the Radical Party. the traditional voice of the middle class and the source of successful civilian governments in the past. Among middle- and upper-class conservatives, the military no longer appears a viable alternative even if civilians falter.

The new government, which is to be elected in October for inaugural next January, should have a better than even chance to redeem the reputation of civilian rule. If so, it can belp redeem Argentina's reputation in the world. A succession of strutting strongmen has brought a proud and well-endowed people only contempt and casualties.

On Labeling Films

Other Opinion

Department to label three Canadian documentary films "political propaganda" involves two films about acid rain and one, which has been nominated for an Academy Award, about nuclear disarmament. Not one of the three threatened the box-office reign of "E.T." But now many otherwise indifferent people will want to see them to learn what the fuss is about. What is so threatening about these documentaries that they must be labeled and shown only with a disclaimer that the U.S. government does not approve of them? Whyshould the Justice Department need, want or be given a list of those to whom the film is

Dozens of films. American and foreign, could be characterized as political propaganda of some sort. But U.S. society thrives on free political discourse. It is essential to the democratic form of government Americans have chosen and are constantly trying to perfect. And the taking of names of citizens who express or even choose to listen to unpopular argument is absolutely contrary to the values held by Americans.

Yes, the Canadians believe that particles

The State Department, for example, has good reason to believe that another picture nominated for an Academy Award, Missing," is an inaccurate account of events during the coup in Chile. The department countered by issuing press releases and otherwise vigor-ously arguing its case. Why cannot this meth-od be used with films made by foreign govern-

There is nothing wrong with notifying viewers of these films that they have been prepared by foreign governments, or with the U.S. government's presenting another side of the story. WASHINGTON — The summit meeting of the nonaligned movement in New Delhi this week provides a kind of sobriety test for the Third World. A change in the venue and the leadership of the affair facilitates reversal of a recent tilt toward Moscow.

Stringent economic conditions foster a sense of realism. The drift of politics in the developing countries creates opportunities for leaders interested in keeping up the decencies toward the United States.

Havana was the site of the last session of the nonaligned countries, in September 1979. Fidel Castro dominated the proceedings. A distinctly anti-American tone pervaded speeches and resolutions. No sin of imperialism went imporiced. But a blind eye was turned toward glaring cases of troublemaking by the Soviet Union in Asia, Africa and South America.

Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, the host, should be the lead figure this time. She has been put under pressure by the recent riots in Assam to show an instinct for law and order. The Soviet occupation of Afghanistan gives her motives to stand up, on her own behalf and that of her neighbors, to Moscow. So her influence should work toward holding the line against the Kremlin and its proteges in Cuba, Libya, Ethiopia and Syria.

Some wind has already been taken out of Oil-exporting nations now fight for markets' in the developed world. Kuwait and Algeria have come off that famous radical put-on the call for a New World Economic Order. Indeed, the Algerian leader, President Bendjedid Chadli, in a notable step toward moderation, recently buried the hatchet at a meeting with his strongly pro-American neighbor, King Has-san II of Morocco.

The military rout suffered by the Palestine Liberation Organization in the Lebanese fighting has humbled a main source of radical rodomontade in the Arab world. The Syrians did not show to much better advantage, and the war between Iran and Iraq ties up two more paladins of radical nationalism

Serious regimes with a stake in steady prog-ress toward concrete goals have benefited in consequence. Egypt stands on the verge of re-

The Greek leader, Andreas Papandreou, is a particular thorn in the American side. But his interest in New Delhi will be to team up with Felipe González of Spain and the Yugoslavs, who are founding members of the nonaligned movement, in a southern bloc. Together they will at least go down the middle between Washington and Moscow.

Censure of American policies, to be sure, cannot be entirely avoided. Indeed, the Reagan administration could do with a little public shoving on such matters as arms control and a more generous approach toward the financial problems of the developing world. But criticism, this time, should be balanced by pressure on the Soviet Union. Moreover, the anti-American the soviet Union. ican comments will surely be milder at Delhi, 1983, than in Havana, 1979.

So if the New Delhi session does relied a sobering up by the Third World, there is reson for Washington to adjust American policies of cordingly. Now that basic principles have been re-established by the Reagan administration the United States interest his in a more award from an embattled world.

world, with a long period of low growth and high unemployment.

From their perspective, Canada's economic decline has revealed the "heavy cost for Quebec of being part of Canada." They feel that Ottawa.

in its efforts to cope with the eco-nomic situation, is moving further to centralize political power, as evi-dence, they point to Ottawa's determination to prevent provincial governments from owning more than 10 percent of interprovincial transportation companies and the Supreme Court decision rejecting Quebec's contention that it had a veto over constitutional issues.

More widely, they contend that Canada cannot survive in this new economic environment without political change. These changes must result in the decentralization of political and economic power. In the Great Depression, political centralization was the result of economic crisis; now less centralization is required, they say.

But for much of Canada, they argue, the logic of decentralization and regionalization leads north-south, across the border with the United States, rather than east-west. The United States and Canada are each other's largest trading partners; almost 70 percent of Canada's exports flow south to the United States. Moreover, by 1987, when the Tokyo Round of tariff reductions are complete, 75 to 85 percent of trade between the two will be duty free.

In their view. Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has been trying for 20 years to push against the evolving pattern of trade and eco-nomic development in North Ameri-ca. As one Quebec minister observes, efforts to encourage eastern Canada to sell to westerners in Vancouver when the natural market is to the south lack any sense of reality. But while the leaders of the Parti Québécois are optimistic about Quebec's prospects as an autonomous entity, they are aware that Quebec cannot survive on its own, and they are deeply concerned about Canada's economic fragility and about the increasing danger of protectionism in the United States. They fear that Ottawa's energy and foreign investment policies and Washington's "Buy American" and other nontariff barners are dangerous steps toward the balkanization of the continent.

Their answer is a common market of the "three nations north of the Rio Grande," a new political arrangement that would link the econom of these nations in a mutually supportive system.

There argument should not be dismissed casually. We cannot expect a return to the growth economy of the 1960s, and the effect on Canada may he severe: With falling energy and commodity prices, with a dated industrial sector and with inflation still running higher than in other industrial nations, Canada is in trouble.

in effect, Quebec's leaders are addressing an issue neither Washington nor Ottawa is prepared to confront: the political implications of the current economic crisis and the need to think in continental terms. In the last two years, relations between the two nations have been as poor as they have been in decades. The bickering has diminished in recent months, but nowhere on the agenda is the ques-tion of continental collaboration. In a world of rising protectionism and shrinking trade, a North American common market that builds on the natural flow of trade across the border could help to limit political con-flict and sustain economic well-being

The Euromissiles question is already causing enough trouble, many politicians say. They see no need to increase their problems now by planning the installation of U.S. nerve-gas depots in western Europe.

This concern is understandable because Europe is considered by military strategists to be the ideal theater of their spreading to developing for the use of nerve gases at the start of military operations. A similar uneasiness has been noted in the capitals of several Warsaw countries, even though in those countries such preoccupations do not surface easily.

Nerve gases, which kill human he ings by a chemical mechanism similar to that of insecticides, are formed by combining two chemical conpounds, each of which is compara tively easy to produce. Eastern and Western scientists familiar with this technology agree that almost any country of the Third World, even ones with a low level of scientific and industrial development, could produce the two compounds.

The possibility that these weapons may be used in Europe and the nex . countries has prompted new propos als for the creation of zones around the world that would be free of chemical weapons. BERLIN — Adolf Hitler [yesterday] wiped out the memory of his defeat at the hands of President Paul von Hindenburg, just a year ago, and stands indisputably Germany's "man of destiny," as was France's other "little corporal" somewhat more than a century ago. For the first time since the revolution of 1918, opponents of the republic have won the support of a clear majority of the German people, thereby making possible the work of counterrevolution along constitutional lines.

There have been persistent hints in recent years that the government was prepared to consider the possibility of granting normal freehold property rights to blacks.

Appeal on behalf of doctor Philippe AUGOYARD, Imprisoned in Kabul

On the 16th January 1983, Doctor Philippe AUGOYARD was captured by soviet troops in Afghanistan. The young French doctor had been working for several months in the village of Sedjrawand, giving free medical attention to the civilian population. Captured at the end of three days of pursuit, trudging in the snow, he witnessed the summary execution of those Afghans who were accompanying him. Led back to Kabul, he is imprisoned there today in a secret place. Neither his family, his friends nor the French authorities have been able, despite repeated demands, either to visit him or even to be informed of the place where he is held prisoner. For about two years now, by their continuous presence, handfuls of French doctors and nurses of the associations Médecins Sans Frontières, Médecins du Monde and Aide Médicale Internationale try to alleviate the sufferings of a population which no longer enjoys medical care. for the first time, one of them has been arrested. Their mission is solely one of assistance to people in danger.

Bankers Are the Main Movers In Quiet Week for Investors

PARIS — A glance at the new issue calendar last week would undoubtedly give the impression that it was a busy week for the Eurobond market. It was for underwriters. But despite all the activity, inves-

Overall, there was a lack of conviction linvestors were in no rush to buy bonds, believing that the market would not run away and that there would be plenty of time and opportunity to pick and choose. They were in no rush to move out of the dollar, or into the dollar.

By contrast, analysis said there was lots of activity and interest in equities. Available resources are going into stocks rather than bonds, and the stock markets in New York and Frankfurt reflected this.

But bankers, convinced that interest rates must decline, were happy to bring new issues to the market and keep them in inventory. The cost of holding the new issues nets the bankers a profit and when rates do decline there could even be some substantial capital gains to be carned.

The delicate timing of arranging inthinst to term year.

The delicate timing of arranging a swap probably explains why the fixed rate paper was sold even though the demand was not there. Not all of the deals were swaps,

Bank of America, for example, issued $300 million through its branch in Jersey. The bank itself is rated triple-A, while the parent holding company is only a double-A. These deposit notes are being sold in units of $1,000 and each bears a warrant, good for one year, to buy a like number of deposit notes.

The notes have a life of five years and bear a coupon of 8 percent. The notes are being offered at a discount of 93%, or $936.25. Calculating the capital gain to be earned when the notes are redeemed at full value of $1,000 gives a yield to maturity of 9.667 percent.

The warrant, which can be used to buy an identical bond at a price of -94%, is estimated to have a value of about $10, which raises the value of the overall package to investors to about 9.87 percent. And adding in the 1% percent commission that underwriters earn, the value of the paper to managers is equal to about 10% percent.

Only $200 million of the total package is being offered immediately. The remaining $100 million will be tapped into the market at a later date. American Express offered $100 million of seven-year bonds at par bearing a coupon of 10% percent. Part of this issue is being used as a swap, bankers said.

The terms on the Amex issue were considered overly aggressive and the paper was quoted at a two-point discount. Critics noted that the seven-year issue for Credit Suisse, priced at par bearing a coupon of 10½ percent, was quoted at par after the amount was increased to $150 million from the $100 million initially indicated.

Many consider Credit Suisse to be a better name. On the other hand, magers of the Amex issue maintain that there is a scarcity value for U.S. names. Amex is estimated to have saved half a point in interest charges by issuing its paper in Paris rather than in New York.

Among the nonbank issuers, two stand out. The European Community's $75 million of 12-year bonds was widely criticized for being too imagenerous—it was offered at 99% bearing a coupon of 10% percent to yield 10.86 percent and was quoted at 97% for a yield of 11.18 percent.

Credit Lyonnais won the mandate to manage the issue in competitive bidding and critics warned that the EC risks earning the same kind of miserly reputation as the EIB has with investors if it continues to pay so little attention to how its paper trades in the secondary market. At the other end of the spectrum was the five-year issue for BC Hydro, guaranteed by the province of British Columbia. The amount was increased to $200 million from the $150 million initially indicated. The notes were offered at a discount of 99% bearing a coupon of 10% percent to yield 10.37 percent. By Friday, the paper was quoted at a slim half point discount of 99.

In the Denstche mark sector, only two new issues were launched last week in the run-up to Sunday's general election. However, with most observers convinced that the Christian Democrats will win, the mark strengthened and bond prices rose as foreign investors began moving back into the mark. The improvement in the bond market was helped by further easing of domestic money-market rates and analysts were forebe free to push rates lower.

Activity will step up this week with four issues scheduled: the Korean Development Bank, Nippon Credit Bank, Michelin and Belgium.

The Bank of Spain Friday ap-pointed two supervisors each for Banca Masaveu, based in Oviedo and Banco de Expansion Industri-al, of Barcelona, which officials said were tied to Rumasa through an intermediary.

Banca Masaveu is the 63rd larg est commercial bank in Spain, with deposits last Dec. 31 of 8.5 billion pesetas ($65 million), while Banco de Expansion Industrial is No. 137, ith about half as many deposits.

Rumasa, Spain's largest holding company, was nationalized Feb. 24 to avoid its financial collapse, according to the Socialist government. The government's move was ratified by the Cortes, or parliament, last Wednesday.

More than 200 firms, including banks, were on the original expropriation list but Economics Minister Miguel Boyer told the Cortes last week that there were as many as 100 more whose ties to Rumasa were covered up.

The government Friday appoint ed two special prosecutors. Fernando Jimenez and Jose Julian Hernandez, to investigate the possibility of criminal actions in connection with what Mr. Boyer had said were Rumasa's questionable financial practices and hundreds of millions of dollars in unpaid taxes.

Rumasa's founder and head until the nationalization, José Maria Ruiz Mateos, has denied any wrongdoing and has said that his business empire was in no financial trouble.

THE FRONT PAGE

From The International Herald Tribune

On every page of this documentary book, you'll feel the urgency of great historical news stories as if they were breaking today. Reproductions of 129 front pages, many with Herald Tribune exclusive articles: like the firsthand report from the sinking Titanic by a Tribune reporter who was aboard, the Dreyfus trial, the Venice campanile caught in midcollapse by a Tribune photographer!

Follow coverage of the First World War by one of the few newspapers that stayed in Paris and was virtually edited at the front.

Read about people — Queen Victoria. Lindbergh. Jack the Ripper, the Windsors. Stalin — a century of news headliners and the events that surrounded them.

Hard cover, 28 x 38 centimeters, readablesize text. The book is divided into five chronological sections, each with an introduction describing the period from historical and journalistic viewpoints.

THE FRONT PAGE is a distinctive personal or business gift. Order one - or several - today.

Bykova's clearance also bettered

Although the Soviet Union topped the unofficial medals table with eight golds, the powerful East German contingent claimed three of the four world bests set here. It missed out on a fourth by only one hundredth of a second when Marlies Goehr retained her 60 meters title in 7.09 seconds, a whisker shy of compatriot Marita Koch's 7.08 world mark.

Less to 7.48 seconds. Munkeit, the Olympic 110-meter hurdles champion, beat the previous best of 7.54 then failed to clear 2.05.

The missed out on a fourth by only one hundredth of a second when Marlies Goehr retained her 60 meters was Munkelt's fourth victory at a done, she said.

proponensity for looking back at history and asking "What if?"

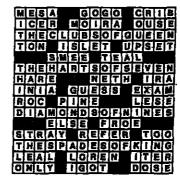

In this, his 13th book, Alfred Coppel tinkers with history by having lightning destroy the original A-bomb during its test at Trinity Site in New Mexico in mid-July 1945, an accident delaying the incineration of Hiroshima from August 1945 until the next March. The United States is forced to revert to the iron bomb and its earlier plan for the invasion of the Japanese homeland.

Operation Olympic, the invasion of Kyushu, was scheduled for Nov.

1. Operational plans estimated casualties running into the millions. Japan had never lost to a foreign power, the way of the Samurai was to die. Shinto made surrender anathema, and the entire popula-tion — man, woman and child fighting on its own turf promised the invading Americans the bloodi-est confrontation in history.

Coppel's conception has used the official assault plans and later military analyses of both sides, thus conferring credibility on his story, and his ability to blend the sweeping strategic and tactical de-tail of the antagonists is excellent. By winter of 1945, eastern and southern Kyushu has been taken and many Japanese forces are retreating north to the Kwanto' Plain of Honshu for the final battle. Tojo has been returned to pow-er by the militarists in Tokyo and is now a virtual Shogun. The Americans decide to bypass northern Kyushu and launch Operation Coronet, the final assault on the Honshu heartland, on March I. Coppel's plot concerns mainly this two-week period of land and sea battle before Hiroshima is de-

But when it occurs, it is formitous—one of several words Coppel should look up. On one page he has an American watching for fife smear or flame and smoke marking the encorage of a Jananese spotter plane and it of a Japanese spotter plane and II pages later he sees the twising "smear of oily flame and smoke." In the acid ambiance of dose combat, soldiers always smell the last voiding of the bowels of the last voiding of the bowels of the dying, and bladders flush from ter-ror and elation.

The main plot reunites Ranger Lieutenant Harry Scaver with his friends Mr. Kantaro and Katsuko Maeda in the neighborhood the three lived and played in as children. In an absurdly unreal denouement, Mr. Kantaro, now a colonel with the Imperial Forces, is wounded and slits his belly, after which Mr. Seaver, his for-friend obligingly severs his head. Then amid the din and dying, Mr. Search beds down with Katsuko Maela. her energetic love-making doing much to belie intelligence reports that the Japanese were subsisting on less than 300 calories a day at the time.

LAHTI, Finland (UPI) - Canada's Horst Bulau kept himself in contention for the Ski Jumping World Cup when he won the 90-meter event Sunday at the Salpausselka Games, while Finland's Matti Nykaenen could only manage third place.

However, the Finn now needs only one second place from the two final meets of the season. In the overall standings, Nykaenen has 267 points while Bulau has 252.

Bulau, in posting his third win in 10 days and his seventh of the season, leapt 114 and 109.5 meters to register 257.7 points. Austrian Armin Kogler, who has won the last two World Cups, was second for the third straight event. He achieved jumps of 113 and 103 meters for 247.2

Croeso Captures Florida Derby

HALLANDALE, Flordia (AP) - Croeso defeated 2-5 favorite Copelan by 11/4 lengths to win the 11/4-mile Florida Derby on Saturday. Croeso's owners, Roy Fowler and Cardiff Stud, have still not decided whether the 3-year-old gelding will enter the 109th running of the Kentucky Derby on May 7.

With two months to go before the Kentucky Derby, no 3-year-old enjoys a clearcut favorite's role. Churchill Downs announced in Louis-ville, Kentucky, that 405 horses have been nominated for the Kentucky Derby, raising the possibility of 20-horse field for the May 7 race.

Gerd Knäpper, a German, Is Becoming One Of the Most Innovative Potters in Japan

By Christine Chapman International Herold Tribune

DAIGO, Japan — Up in the mountains and rice fields of northeastern Japan lives one of the nation's most innovative potters - Gerd Knäpper - whose kilns turn out prize-winning pieces which have become collector's items. In the world's foremost ceramics country, Knäpper is an outsider, a German, who was first recognized in 1971 when the Japanese Ministry of Culture awarded him first prize in the National Ceramics Competition.

"I was the only foreign potter in the show," he said in his home in rural Ibaraki prefecture, about 200 kilometers (125 miles) north of Tokyo. "Out of 700 pieces exhibited. my plate, a decorative bowl about two feet in diameter, won the prize. Then I decided I had to stay in Japan. I had to keep working."

When he was 23, Knapper came to Japan in 1966 via Anchorage, Alaska, where he had spent the summer making Eskimo masks. "I worked my way on a freighter from San Francisco. He headed for Seto, one of the six ancient kilns, a pottery center from the time of the Kamakura period (1185-1333), where he studied for six months, until he ran out of money. He returned to Anchorage to work, then went back to West Germany for more study until he found his way to England and Saint Ives, where he met the famous English potter Bernard Leach. Leach gave him an introduction to a master-potter, Tatsuzo Shimaoka of Mashiko, who became Knäpper's teacher and sponsor.

Mashiko is an old pottery village revived to modern fame by Shoji Hamada, the great Japanese potter who headed the mingel, or folk-art, movement of the 1920s. Hamada wanted to preserve the ancient traditions of ceramics. When he moved to Mashiko in 1924 to set up his kiln, other potters followed until today the town is a tourist attraction and still a center for pottery. Knäpper learned Japanese techniques and won the Culture Ministry's first prize for his decora-

Since then Knäpper has been potting steadily in Japan and traveling abroad to exhibit his work and lecture. During 1980 and 1981, the Japan Foundation sponsored a traveling exhibition of his works of the last 15 years — 105 pieces, including very large ones. Knäpper and the pottery went to Cologne, Ludwigshafen, Baden-Baden and Hannover, in West Germany, and to Copenhagen, Bangkok and Hong Kong.

In pointing to Knapper's "uniqueness and excellence," Hiroshi Murata. executive director of the Japan Foundation, has written: To Japanese soil and Japanese traditional techniques, he has added his own native German sensibilities, and created thereby an artistic idiom that serves as an imaginative bridge between East and West." This month Knäpper's ceramics will be on pas grass. On a melon-shaped bowl incised curves add grace. Among the pieces he makes for tea ceremony, water containers shaped like swelling wombs are decorated with a heavy curved line like the undulating roof tiles of Japanese homes. Recently he has been making heavier pieces, solid, strong, square vases and plates that suggest ancient weight and utility. They are architectural shapes, sometimes slab-constructed. Ideas come to him readily from nature or chistory. Japan's Jomon era (up to 200 B.C.) inspired a rope-patterned vase; the shape of the imperial flower, the chrysanthemum, forms the design for a big plate. Travels in Korea seem to have evoked other

"When I start working in the morning I think of a number of pieces I want to get done in the day. I prepare my clay and transform the shape in my head right away to the wheel. If I'm not at work, I will do sketches for memory so the ideas don't run away from me," he explained.

"Sometimes a good idea turns out to be not such a good idea. I find that out after it's fired," he said. "The firing itself does a lot of change to the piece which I neither can nor aim at controlling too much."

In the rice fields of Daigo, the potter lives with his wife and two young daughters in the former manor house of a local landowner. About 80 years old, the house is another the control of the local landowner. Knäpper example of history revitalized. He and his wife, Kieko, a Japanese woman from Hokkaido, recreated it from a tumbledown building with a rotted thatched roof. Today the roof has sumptnous new thatching and the rooms are wide and pleasing with the original dark beams exposed.

Knäpper turned the cowshed into a workshop, the rice storehouse into a display room; he house his apprentices in the gatchouse, and he built three kilns on the property, which he calls "Tarosaka": a gas kiln, a salt glaze German kiln for wood-firing, and his pet, a large four-chamber noborigama, or climbing-kiln, adapted from a Korean model.

"My production is not large enough to use the noborigama more than once or twice a year." he explained. However, he fires his gas kiln about every two months.

His income derives from two or three sales exibitions in Japan and West Germany during the year. He also has private customers who pay from 5,000 yen (about $22) for a small tea cup, to 400,000 or 500,000 yen ($1,740-$2,175), for a large decorative bowl or plate. His vases range in price from $100 to $2,000.

"I still have lots to do," said Knäpper, who was born in Wuppertal in 1943. "I want to be more active in cultural and art exchanges between Japan and Germany and other coun-

SHETLANDS POSTCARD

Tending to Their Knits. By Erica Brown

New York Times Service

THE PEOPLE of the Shetland Islands, a group of more than 100 windswept islets 100 miles off the northeastern tip of Scotland, are looking to their past to help them survive when their present rins out. The present, the exploitation of North Sea oil and the building of an oil processing terminal on one of the islands, has brought the Shetlandess great prosperity in recent years and low unemployment compared with the rest of Britain.

But the oil is expected to run out

But the oil is expected to run out in the first quarter of the 21st century and the Shetland Islands Council has decided to invest some of the $1.5 million a year it gets from the oil companies in promoting and marketing one of its oldest traditions: the intricate, geometrically patterned Shetland and Fair Isle knitware. (Shetland and Fair Isle are closely related but not interchangeable. The patterns are the same but Shetland uses different shades of one color, Fair Isle several colors.)

"Thanks to designers like Ralph Lauren, these patterns have be-come very fashionable in the last two years," said John Wilcox, marketing consultant to the council, but there have been a lot of cheap, both in price and quality, imitations coming from Taiwan and Mauritius. The terms 'Shetland' and 'Fair Isle' have become generic but the islanders feel very strongly that even the Lauren garments do not match up to the real ones. Very often, for example, the patterns are not matched at the seams, as they always should be."

So the Shetland Knitwear Trades Association has been formed with its own registered trademark: a line drawing of a Shetland Island woman plying her needles. Only knitwear made in the islands will carry this logo.

At the moment, that means about 500,000 items a year: heavygauge sweaters (locally called gansies), cardigans, gloves, scarfs, hats, lacy tops, stoles and shawls. All are made by "outworkers," who knit at home either by hand or on small hand frames.

"Hand frames can only be used for nonpatterned areas," said Laurence Smith, whose company em-ploys about 600 islanders. "Everyone works freelance and there is a great tradition of men as well as women knitting. It has always been curtains and clothes that waster. a part-time occupation here, along-side the main business of farming your croft or fishing. Now a lot of the men are employed by the oil companies but will still do the potter and his work will be featured in an art book, "Contemporary Japanese Ceramic Arts," an illustrated volume to be published by Kodansha, which has him in good company, with the late Bernard Leach and the U.S.

However, his feeling is that when he moved 70 kilometers from Mashiko to Daigo in 1975, "I placed myself out of a potter com-

To look at his pots - the vases, plates, bowls, tea ware, ceramic lanterns — is to see the connection with the Japanese past. Knapper has absorbed not only Japanese techniques, but he has also captured a feeling for the country's beauty. He is in love with round shapes, with the globes and moons and melons that become vases. Japan's penchant for geometric design and the use of patterns from nature are reflected on his pots. The curved line appears carved or as inlay on most of his pieces. The carved pattern "is my real trademark," he said.

The curving line assumes a variety of patterns depending on the size or the function of the pot. On a porcelain vase there will appear inlaid waves or the etched suggestion of parnarchitect and potter Osamu Noguchi.
